California Schools, like schools across the country, are reckoning with systemic racism and other forms of oppression in curriculum and school practices. In addressing these issues, teachers are identifying opportunity gaps at the institutional, interpersonal, and individual level and working together to close them. Challenges arise when identifying solutions or the “what now” when the gaps are exposed.

In this webinar, we hear from six experienced panel members that will share specific examples of humanizing, caring and sustainable ways teacher can use their practice to empower students. The goal of this webinar is to share practices and curriculum that leave students feeling more like themselves after we teach them than before.

SPEAKERS

Dr. Keisha Allen, Ph.D.
University of Maryland
Baltimore Country

Dr. Antoinette Linton, Ed.D.
California State University
Fullerton

Dr. Toni M. Williams, Ph.D.
University of South Carolina
Columbia

Dr. Kindel Nash, Ph.D.
University of Maryland
Baltimore Country

Dr. Connor K. Warner, Ph.D.
University of Utah

Pre-registration is required. Registration is open NOW https://tinyurl.com/Y2Anti-RacismEdSeries

All webinars will be recorded

Contact Dr. Antoinette Linton: alinton@fullerton.edu